At the Piping Hot Polo Club Mrs. De Brie and Mrs. Marblehead are impatiently awaiting their tardy husbands. When Marblehead arrives with a black eyes, his wife demands an explanation. Seeing a story in the newspaper about an unknown hero saving a child from a runaway horse, he tells her he was that hero. Then De Brie arrives with a black eye, and, getting the same inspiration, tells how he saved three children from three runaway horses. Both are forgiven, and they attend a showing of the news weekly at the club. The reel shows the Purity League cleaning out a bootleg den, and among those thrown out are De Brie and Marblehead-- each with a black eye! Later there is a polo match, with De Brie and Marblehead playing. The game is played on the boulevards and crowded business streets of the city, and everything in their path is destroyed. The game is finally won when Marblehead's horse kicks him and the ball over the goal line.
